Biography

Dr. Susan Levy, D.C., is a licensed Doctor of Chiropractic and a Diplomate in Chiropractic Orthopedics. As a (w)holistic practitioner, she has had over forty-five years of experience in various branches of the health field.

Her broad professional career includes two certifications in Acupuncture, along with extensive study of massage, polarity therapy, nutrition, and herbology. Dr. Levy also holds a degree in Registered Nursing, with expertise in such major fields of nursing as general medical, neurology, neurosurgery, spinal cord and brain injury rehabilitation, cardiovascular, pediatrics, intensive care, burn care and kidney transplant units.

Her first training was as a nursing assistant, which soon inspired her to become a registered nurse. She took classes in massage, reflexology, and herbs due to her interest in helping people by using non-invasive natural therapies. She worked in many phases of nursing, including acute burn care and spinal cord injury rehabilitative care.

She was then inspired to go to Chiropractic College, based on the successful treatment of her long-standing back pain by a chiropractor. During her time in Chiropractic College, Dr. Levy enthusiastically studied nutrition, homeopathy, cranial manipulation, and many other (w)holistic treatments. She continues to pursue the study of these topics to this day.

After graduating from Chiropractic College, Dr. Levy started her (w)holistic practice in 1981. In 1985, she received the Chiropractor of the Year award from the Colorado State Chiropractic Society. In 1986, she received the Meritorious Service Award. She continued to study, taking post-graduate classes often, and earning a post-graduate degree in Chiropractic Orthopedics in 1987.

She helped organize the certification course in acupuncture for Colorado Chiropractors, and completed the course work herself, receiving certification in acupuncture in 1987, and continues her acupuncture studies.

Dr. Levy has been studying and using Clinical Kinesiology since 1989 to evaluate patients and determine their appropriate treatments. This natural diagnostic tool allows for a very in-depth evaluation of the root causes of dis-ease. This provides a systematic pathway for evaluating each patient's condition, that condition's cause and origin, and the appropriateness of various treatments. During the summer and fall of 1993, Dr. Levy appeared in a two-part television series, aired nationwide, on "Chiropractors," which featured her practice of Clinical Kinesiology.

Dr. Levy is the author of Your Body Can Talk, Second Edition, published by Kalindi Press in 2014. Dr. Levy researched for several years before producing the first edition with Carol Lehr as co-author, published in 1996 by Hohm Press. This book describes Clinical Kinesiology and acupuncture, discussing several health conditions. It is a wonderful handbook for all practitioners using or interested in Applied or Clinical Kinesiology, as well as being an easily understood text for their patients.

Arriving in May 2017, Your Aging Body Can Talk, published by Kalindi Press, became Dr. Levy's second published book. Your Aging Body Can Talk is written for reference and immediate use by health practitioners and maturing health-conscious consumers. Focused through the lens of Clinical Kinesiology, a method for self-testing what the body knows and needs, this book consistently places the concerns of an aging population in the forefront. Watch for other interesting books soon to be published!

Dr. Levy's positive, gentle, healing presence promotes an alternative method for restoring and maintaining health. Her popular seminars, newsletters, and articles emphasize natural health care through balance, harmony, expertise, and love. She continues to research pathways to assist her patients as expediently as possible and is eager to share this remarkable approach with her colleagues. She lives in Colorado.

Wellness

We all strive to keep ourselves healthy and free of disease.
Holistic health care is a means to that end.

To understand Holistic health is to consider the whole person. It takes into account the BODY, MIND, EMOTION, SPIRIT and ENVIRONMENT. Good health is the result of harmonious interaction of these five areas. You, the client/patient, are an active participant in your health plan because you have the ultimate responsibility for your health and happiness.

Good health means much more than being free of disease. There are twelve factors in recognizing good health. These are:

1. Energy for all activities and a surplus for recreation
2. Good appetite and digestion
3. Good elimination
4. Healthy skin and eyes
5. Flexibility both in body and mind
6. Good memory/clear thinking
7. Freedom from anxiety and worry
8. Ability to enjoy activities and recreation and ability to relax
9. Good communication skills
10. Spontaneous humor and laughter
11. High personal self-esteem and esteem for others
12. Freedom from disease

A basic approach to wellness is having a sound nutritional philosophy, which is based on the sense that food is a natural medicine. Our bodies intuitively know they need high quality foods to maintain a steady, strong rhythm with life. When we speak of these kinds of foods, we mean the fresh, whole and alive quality of them. In addition, it is essential to balance our bodies with clear water, fresh air, some regular form of exercise, relaxation or meditation, and a positive attitude about ourselves.

Life is ours to live fully each day at a time. When we dedicate ourselves to a holistic style of living our choices for good life become easier and we can make a positive difference in the wellness of our families and ultimately the wellness of our world.

How to Get the Most Out of Your Nutritional Supplements

As you cultivate a welcoming, positive attitude towards the great benefits of the nutritional supplements recommended for you, you benefit more from eating them. Work out a routine so that you take them consistently, without fail, according to your recommended schedule. Setting up doses for a week or two in advance and color-coding containers for morning, noon, and night makes things go smoothly. Snack baggies or small empty supplement bottles work well as containers.

Take only the highest quality natural nutritional supplements. A great selection is in stock at Natural Solutions.

How you take your supplements also has a great impact on their absorption and effectiveness:

TABLETS

Generally speaking, only two types of tablets should be swallowed with liquid:

1. Time Release Tablets
2. Betaine Hydrochloride (HCL): swallow 2-5 minutes after you finish your meal (see handout).

All other tablets typically are best chewed with food. Because they are concentrated specialized foods, most nutritional tablets are best absorbed when they are chewed with your foods. Put a bite of food in your mouth, add the tablet, and CHEW well. Some foods particularly well suited are applesauce, yogurt, tomato juice, and smoothies. EXPERIMENT!

Other, less preferred methods, in descending order of benefit:

1. Break up the tablet and swallow the small pieces.
2. Powder tablet, then mix with applesauce, yogurt, tomato juice, or smoothies, or put into an empty capsule and swallow.
3. The very least beneficial method is to swallow the tablet whole.

If necessary, a liquid or pellet homeopathic equivalent may be available.

The worst possible option, only for the real wimps, is to leave your supplements in the bottle.

CAPSULES

Take your capsules with meals, swallowing them throughout the meal.

HERBAL TINCTURES

Take your dose with or without food. You may dilute with juice or water as desired.

HOMEOPATHIC LIQUIDS AND PELLETS

Homeopathic remedies should be taken 15 minutes away from food or drink. For more information, see the Handout "Guidelines for Taking Homeopathic Remedies."

Guidelines for Taking Homeopathic Remedies

1. Take nothing by mouth fifteen minutes prior to or following dosage. This includes food, drink, nutrients, cigarettes, chewing gum, toothpaste, etc. These instructions do not apply to topical applications.
2. As much as possible, eliminate caffeine in any form, i.e., soft drinks, coffee, chocolate, etc. Caffeine may inactivate homeopathic remedies.
3. As much as possible, limit mint in any form, such as tea, candy mints, toothpaste, mouthwash, etc. Mint can be used as an antidote to stop the action of a homeopathic remedy, if necessary.
4. No camphor, such as in muscle and joint rubs.
5. Avoid dental drilling during the span of time you are taking homeopathic remedies. If it is necessary, repeat the remedy, i.e., restarting the duration.
6. Avoid mothballs.
7. Limit breathing in strong odors such as paint thinner, eucalyptus (Vicks[®]), and cigarette smoke.
8. Avoid raw garlic. Cooked garlic is okay.
9. Alcohol Sensitivities: If the patient is sensitive to alcohol, he or she may put the drops into a three-ounce glass of warm water and allow one minute for the alcohol to evaporate. Another method is to put the drops on a plain mini rice cake, allow the drops to dry, and then eat the rice cake. Also, an alcohol sensitive patient can put the drops in a teaspoon and pass the spoon through an open flame (a lit candle) several times to burn off the alcohol, waiting for the spoon to cool prior to taking the dose.
10. Do not put remedy in direct sunlight or near sources of radiation such as televisions, cell phones, microwaves, or computers. Never allow homeopathic remedies (or vitamins or minerals) to go through the x-ray at airport security. Have them hand checked, and show them this memo.
11. Do not touch your remedy if it is in pellet form. Pour the pellets either into the lid of the container or into a non-metal spoon.
12. Do not let the dropper touch any part of your mouth if you have a liquid homeopathic.

By following these guidelines, you will give the homeopathic remedy the greatest opportunity to succeed.

Acupuncture

An Ancient Method for Modern Health

Acupuncture is a system of principles - not simply a technique - which was originated by the ancient Chinese. The most important principle is to restore proper energy flow to the various organs, glands and tissues of the body based on the premise that most diseases are the result of malfunction due to disrupted energies.

The next important principle is based on the Chinese definition of health: “All parts of the body functioning normally.” It follows that an interruption of the transmission of the body’s energy to any part will inevitably cause organ malfunction, disease, pain and suffering.

Both traditional and modern Chinese teachings discuss the “energy principle” or “life force”, called chi. It is the ever present, vital energy which animates, sustains and heals all living beings. The body’s chi is organized into energy pathways called meridians, each being a group of acupuncture points. These pathways might be compared to radio waves which are neither seen nor felt, yet they exist. Radio waves can be clocked or interrupted by a large object. If you remove the object, then the radio wave can be received. Likewise, blockages in the flow of chi occur for many reasons: injuries, imbalances in the body (nutritional, structural and electromagnetic), and poor life-style habits.

Major meridians or pathways of chi consist of an “external” and an “internal” portion. The internal portion is located deep within the torso. It connects with and energizes the organs. This explains how treating an acupuncture point of the surface of the body does affect the organ itself. If a blockage occurs, the appropriate acupuncture points can be treated to remove the blockage, to restore a more optimal circulation of chi and thus enable the body to better heal itself.

A variety of methods can be applied to stimulate the acupuncture points. Commonly a very fine needle is skillfully placed in the appropriate point and then removed after a few minutes. Typically, the patient has virtually no sensation once the needles are inserted. The needle insertion is usually less noticeable than plucking one hair from the forearm. How do the needles work? Like an antenna, drawing external energy into the areas being treated. Most patients report an increased feeling of well-being and relaxation after their acupuncture treatment.

Acupuncture is between 5,000 and 7,000 years old. The earliest culture known to use acupuncture was the ancient Chinese. Its use spread to ancient Japan, Egypt, the Middle East, the Roman Empire, and later into Western Europe. Since the 1970’s many Americans have traveled to China to study acupuncture.

Today acupuncture has become an accepted method of drug-free treatment in our society for helping the body to rid itself of many dysfunctional disease states, for the control of pain and even in substance abuse treatment programs. Modern application of acupuncture includes many needle-less options - mechanical or electrical stimulation, small metal pellets taped over the acupuncture points, small magnets, and even laser stimulation.
